Over 1500 engineering students applied for this scholarship this year out of which 148 students were shortlisted, post a screening and written test. A team comprising of senior members of Swaraj assessed the shortlisted students and finally awarded the scholarship to 58 meritorious students.

During the assessment, all shortlisted students got the opportunity to converse with the seasoned professionals from Swaraj and gathered valuable inputs for their career development. This programme is designed to support meritorious engineering students from economically weak backgrounds and provide them financial assistance along with a holistic industry exposure.

Through the 'Mera Swaraj Education Support Program', students will not only receive financial support for four years, subject to consistent academic performance, but will also get practical exposure to modern tools and technologies through plant and field visits.
